ABOUT THE ARTIST

An international artist working at the intersection of painting, philosophy, and emotional therapy. My unique style - Aerial Renaissance - is characterized by deep compositional balance, masterful use of natural light, and profound emotional richness.

The project explores the themes of human inner transformation, transcending the mundane, and attaining spiritual autonomy.

I create art that elevates the soul above the noise of the earth. My paintings represent light, absolute freedom, and the breath of pure inspiration. Their purpose is to capture that luminous love and depth we search for every day offering a source you can hang on your wall to enjoy forever.

"My mission is not merely to reflect beauty, but to elevate the viewer's soul to a height where breathing is effortless, where fear has no place, and where a true love for life is born.

PROJECT IDEA

The most beautiful masterpiece is love and harmony. Yet, owning one of my paintings is much easier.

Through my art, I strive to offer my clients more than just a painting. I invite them to own their very own piece of heaven a moment of tranquility, beauty, and serenity captured on canvas, created to shine eternally on their walls

My artistic style is rooted in "Airy Romanticism", where softness, light, and emotion come together to create an ethereal and dreamlike atmosphere.

My paintings feature delicate elements such as : "clouds, stars, birds, flowing fabrics, angels, luminous auras, and human figures" . Each element is carefully composed to evoke a sense of peace, freedom, love, and connection with something beyond the ordinary.

What makes my work distinctive is my use of "leaf gilding", incorporating reflective ,gold, silver, and colored leaf" into my paintings. These luminous details interact with light, adding depth, movement, and an almost celestial glow to each piece.

Through this combination of romantic imagery, ethereal light, and reflective materials, I seek to create artworks that feel timeless " pieces of heaven designed to live beautifully and eternally on the walls of those who own them."

GOAL

My goal is to earn an income from my artwork, not to tuck it away in a drawer. Inspiration that brings profit.

VISION

Sales & Business Growth : A well-developed personal brand commanding premium prices. A diverse product range including postcards, prints, and canvas reproductions. Art sales for hotels and restaurants.

Recognition & Popularity : Features in art articles and reviews by art critics. Collaborations with renowned galleries and auction houses. Solo exhibitions. A thriving, engaged creative social media presence.

My key wish for collaboration with jewelry houses is to add jewelry to paintings and embed precious stones. Then the price of the painting increases.

Adam in the Cherry Orchard

"Adam in the Cherry Orchard" carries the idea of a gentle touch with higher powers. It speaks to how spirituality is not a thunderous revelation, but a subtle breeze—barely perceptible, yet infinitely meaningful. The painting fills the space with a sense of lightness, serenity, and inner light.

EVA

The moment of Eve's temptation is not merely a story of sin and weakness, but humanity's first step toward freedom and self-awareness. The forbidden fruit brings not only suffering, but consciousness—without which true life is impossible. Without choice, struggle, and mistakes, an ideal, harmonious Eden would remain nothing more than a frozen dream. By reaching for the apple, Eve embraces a earthly nature where light is known through darkness, and love through overcoming trial. The painting acts as a manifesto for human freedom: to gain true wisdom and rise, one must first have the right to fall. Eve's choice is the choice in all of us on the path toward the light.

Serene Power

At first glance, this celestial child with pink wings embodies pure, defenseless tenderness. Look closer, however, and a deeper dimension emerges: in one hand, they hold an entire constellation; with the other, they spin Saturn like a toy.

This is an allegory of authority that needs no shouting or force—a power as gentle yet inevitable as gravity itself. It reminds us that true strength does not press down; it elevates. Clothed in lightness and beauty, genuine power quietly enters our hearts because it brings joy rather than fear.

Hidden within this angel is a timeless truth: to govern the universe, one does not need a heavy hand. Ultimate power lies in leading without coercion, guiding without breaking, and enchanting without force.

Ascension

This painting is a silent reminder of the soul's celestial origin. At its center stands an angel raising a chalice toward a stream of divine blessing. The pink drapery surrounding her symbolizes eternal, healing love, while the figures below represent humanity instinctively reaching for a higher purpose.

This is a space beyond time and everyday noise. The artwork fills the room with a sense of pure bliss, lightness, and unconditional acceptance. It serves as a sanctuary from worldly cares, helping to uncover within oneself that very divine love, depth, and light that reside as a living source in each of us.

First fluffy cat

The painting was painted when I was 11 and is not available for purchase. It is my quest to discover softness through strokes and form.

Gentle love

This Love is no loud cry, no sudden flame that burns,
Nor fire that consumes when all is through. She gently, like an angel, spreads her wings, To shield and softly safeguard me and you. Artwork Description:

Rendered in watercolor with a delicate pastel palette, this painting depicts an angel and a young woman in classical Greek style. Their postures and gentle expressions evoke an atmosphere of tenderness, love, and refined romance. The golden-haired angel leans toward the woman, their shared gaze capturing a moment of profound intimacy and trembling emotion.

SIZE : 20 X 20 Watercolor

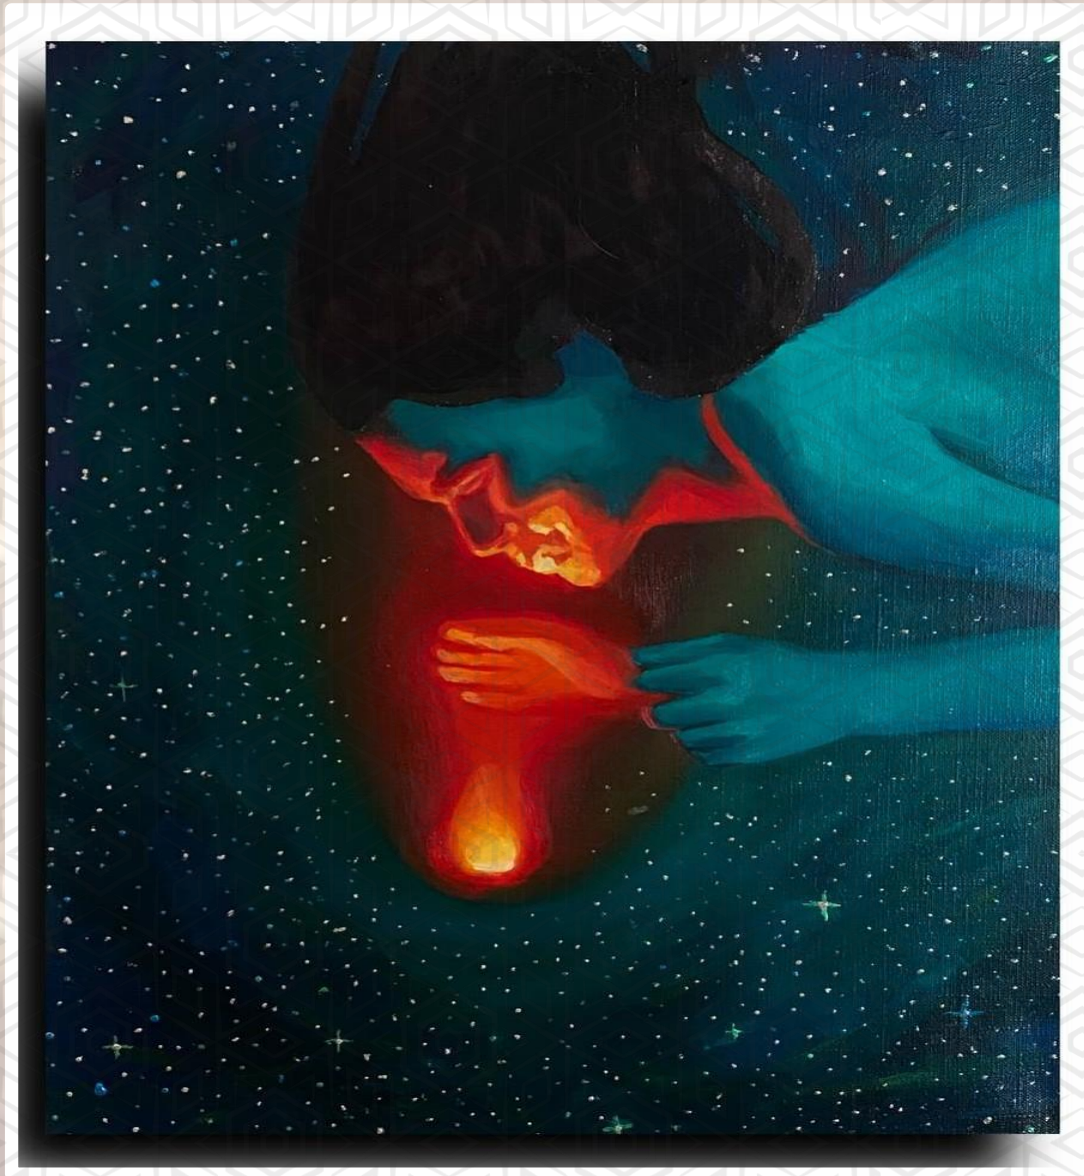

Conversation with the Depth

This Bathed in a warm glow, the figure of a young woman pauses in a moment of absolute stillness. It is as if she is reaching into the innermost sanctuary of her mind - releasing or gently protecting her own inner fire.

Core Meanings:

- Light in the Dark: A reminder that even in our darkest moments, an enduring source of hope, passion, and meaning resides within us.
- Honest Self-Reflection: The art of solitude, where external noise fades away and leaves only the quiet search for inner answers.

This piece speaks to contemplative minds, thinkers, and anyone navigating a journey of self-discovery. It resonates deeply with those who know the value of keeping their inner light burning—even when surrounded by shadow.

SIZE : 40 X 50 OIL PAINTING POTATL

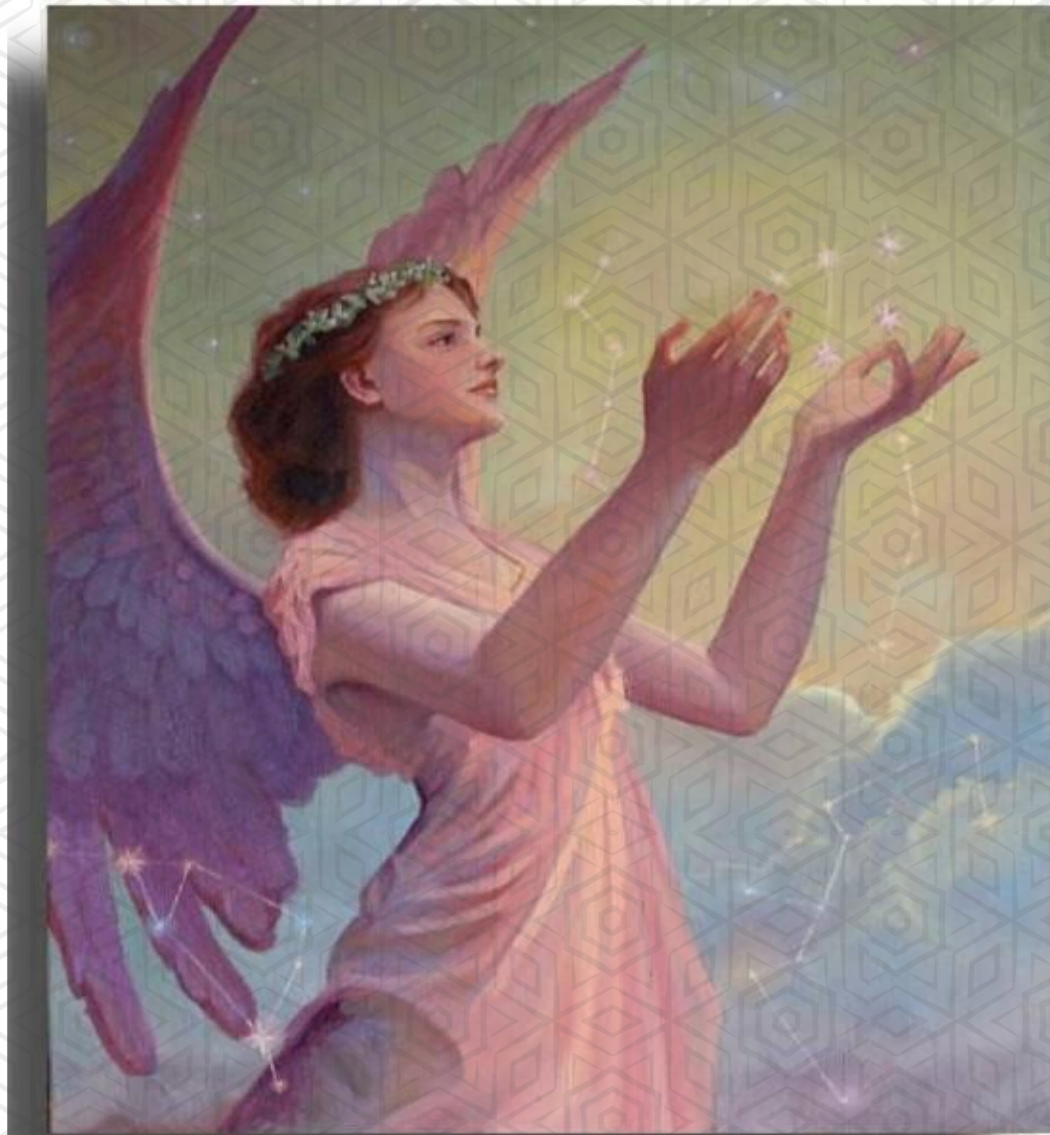

Inspiration

In this artwork, an angel reaching toward the stars serves as an allegory for the creative process. The young woman embodies a pure muse, while the soft pink palette symbolizes tenderness and romanticism. Her wings represent the freedom of thought and inspiration—the ability to rise above the mundane. The laurel wreath marks a triumph over the struggles of artistic pursuit, honoring the achievements and insights gained along the way.

Brilliantly shining constellations represent flashes of insight, breakthrough moments, and a deeper understanding of oneself and the world.

Yet, true inspiration is more than mere euphoria; it is work that demands endurance and the mastery of turbulent forces. Despite her fragile appearance, the angel commands this storm, channeling its energy to bring beauty and harmony out of chaos. The painting reveals that genuine inspiration is a profound, multifaceted process requiring strength, perseverance, and the ability to unite opposites: tenderness and power, light and shadow, stillness and storm.

The silent ocean

A nocturnal encounter between sea and cosmos, where a small red disc on the horizon becomes the central symbol a point of a new beginning.

The deep blue color evokes a sense of infinity and inner freedom, while flickering stars mirror in the water, as if bridging the gap between earthly and cosmic realms. The red light infuses the image with energy and a sense of change: the future is still far off, but its light is already visible.

This is a painting for those who are in a moment of transition, dream of something greater, and are not afraid to embark on a new chapter.

It is something you don't just want to think about it is something you want to gaze into.

call of light

A touching scene from the natural world—two young fawns standing side by side beneath the spreading branches of a tree, as if exploring the world around them together. This painting is about connection, trust, and the quiet happiness of being together. A warm interior piece for those who appreciate nature, family values, and an atmosphere of tranquility.

SIZE : 20 X 20 Acrylic

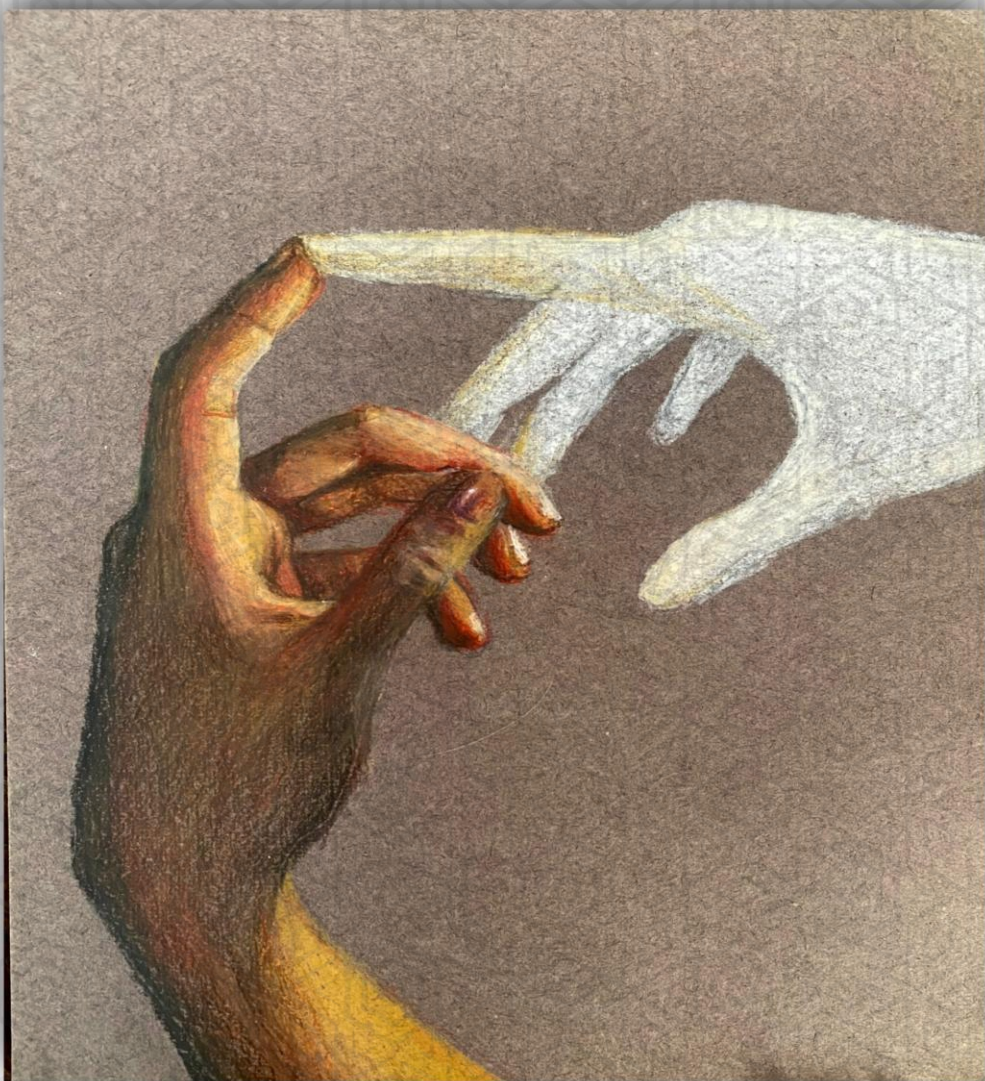

Memory of home

A cozy cityscape filled with warmth, color, and a sense of quiet life. A narrow street, old wooden houses, and soft evening light create the atmosphere of a place where time seems to slow down. This painting is about the simple moments that turn into memories about a town you long to return to, and an evening you want to remember.

A warm, atmospheric piece for those who value comfort, history, and the unique spirit of a place.

The touch

A painting about a moment that lasts just a second, yet can say more than a thousand words.

Two hands reach toward each other one alive, warm, and filled with color, the other almost weightless and bright, as if woven from light. Only a tiny distance remains between them, and it is this very gap that creates the painting's main tension.

This piece is about a connection we feel even when we cannot fully reach one another. It speaks of encounter, intimacy, hope, and the fine line between the earthly and something greater.

The artwork leaves space for your own story everyone can see something of their own in this touch: love, support, a meeting, a farewell, or the hope of finding each other.

Free flight

This painting is about freedom, inner strength, and the ability to follow your own path.

At the center is a graceful bird, captured in a moment of quiet observation. There is no haste in its posture focus, dignity, and a sense of complete inner harmony. A piece for those who appreciate freedom, the beauty of nature, and quiet self-confidence. Sometimes freedom isn't about flying far away, but simply knowing that nothing is stopping you from taking flight.

the Gaze

A small sketch in which I explore the most expressive feature of the human face the eye.

I enjoy observing how even a single eye can convey mood, character, and a whole story. Here, I intentionally left the piece in a sketch format: the texture of the paper, the lines, the search for form, and the lively traces of the process are all visible.

The two eyes seem to reflect different states. One is cooler, deep, almost contemplative. The other is warm, golden, and filled with light. Yet both remain slightly mysterious, as we never quite know what they are looking at.

Felix's dreams

This is Felix the cat. He lives in a cat café, where every day he greets people, shares his warmth with them, and gives them a little glimpse into his feline life.

But every cat has a small world of their own inside. And I wanted to paint not Felix as he is, but as he sees himself in his dreams.

In this painting, Felix sits among the flowers in a quiet, magical garden where everything is filled with light, greenery, and tiny golden lights. He looks thoughtful, as if for a moment he forgot about the café visitors and drifted far, far away .. into his very own happy place.

I believe that animals' dreams are no different from ours. Sometimes it's just a peaceful place, the sun warming your fur, plenty of flowers, and the feeling of being loved.

The Flame between us

A painting about love that can be felt even in silence. Two people stand in a golden field, pressed close to each other, and it feels as though the entire world around them has disappeared for a moment leaving only them and the warmth between them.

The fire around them is not about destruction. It is about passion, intimacy, desire, and that very spark that cannot be faked or invented. The warm golden glow seems to enfold the couple, highlighting the power of their attraction.

A painting about two people who need nothing else when they are together.

Happiness. Admire the Darkness

The title reflects the core contradiction embedded within the painting. The boy serves as a metaphor for the strength of the human spirit and its capacity to find light even in the bleakest circumstances.

Only seven years old, the boy embodies innocence and pure joy. His chase after the soccer ball is more than just a child's game; it is a pursuit of a goal, a reach toward the light symbolized by the bright sun set against the hazy yet tangible slum landscape. Rendered with sweeping brushstrokes, the sun breaks through the gloom, illuminating the boy's path and infusing his figure with warmth and hope as a light breaking through the poverty and desolation of the surrounding world.

The detail dilapidated buildings, a discarded bottle, scattered debris accentuate the harshness of reality and sharpen the contrast between an external world filled with hardship and the child's inner world, filled with happiness. They quietly remind us: "Yes, darkness surrounds him, but here is the source of light within."

Legionary Flight

A small bird among large blossoms a simple yet deeply expressive scene of fragility, beauty, and quietude. The bird seems to have paused for a brief moment, resting within its own little safe haven amidst the flowers. This painting is about small joys, appreciation for the beautiful, and the ability to notice grace in simple moments.

Touch of Nature

A powerful, evocative piece about human closeness, trust, and connection to nature.

At the center of the composition is a hand set against deep green and turquoise tones. Emerging from the darkness, golden lines and flashes of gold leaf transform a simple gesture into a symbolic image a touch as a way to offer warmth, support, and presence.

A piece about how sometimes a single touch is enough to make you feel that you are not alone.

House of the Horizont

A golden field fills nearly the entire canvas, creating a sense of warmth, freedom, and abundance. Set against it, a small house with a red roof and a solitary tree stand out with striking clarity like an anchor and a place you long to return to.

This painting is about home, simplicity, and inner peace. It is about how sometimes, true happiness requires very little: a place of your own, open space around you, and a horizon to gaze into.

A calm, stylish piece with a strong visual statement ideal for an interior that values silence, space, and atmosphere.

The Omen

Kazan Cathedral in St. Petersburg

This painting captures the mystical atmosphere of St. Petersburg - city where eternal twilight, dampness, and grand architecture intertwine in a gothic dance. Kazan Cathedral appears not as the familiar majestic sanctuary, but as a mysterious, almost otherworldly symbol ascending into a blood-pink sky.

The birds flying above the cross, like harbingers of unknown events, add to the tension. The deep shadow crawling across the building hints at hidden meanings: is it a struggle between light and darkness, or merely the play of streetlights on the wet facades?

The artwork is like a frame from an alternative St. Petersburg a ghost city where past and present merge into one, and reality is painted in vivid hues.

SIZE : 40 X 65 OIL PAINTING Portal

The Depth

A painting featuring crystals that seem to capture the very movement of light. A piece for those who appreciate natural beauty, unique textures, and deep, rich colors. It will look particularly stunning in an interior where you want to add a touch of mystery and elegance.

Guardian Of The Light

This is a metaphor for the fragility of life, a call to kindness, and a reminder that every soul, even the smallest, deserves love and care. It invites you to pause for a moment, forget the hustle and bustle, and feel the spirit of innocence and tranquility. Life is as fragile as the morning mist, So easy to break and wound without a cause, And only kindness, like a healing balm, Will fill the world with peace and warmth.

The Soul Of the Garden

There are places where time seems to stand still. Where among blooming trees, quiet waters, and soft evening light, you can hear something far beyond the mere rustle of nature. At the heart of this garden stands a luminous figure, as if the very embodiment of its soul. She reaches out toward the light, surrounded by blossoming pink trees, swans reflecting in the water, and a flowing golden glow. Everything here speaks of tenderness, inner freedom, and that exact feeling of finally being right where you find peace. "Soul of the Garden" is a painting for a space where you want to dream, slow down, and feel at home.

Love has a different look

Title: Different on the Outside, One on the Inside

This poignant painting is not merely a portrait of two strangers on a bench, but a story of what unites us. One girl sports vibrant, fiery-red hair, while the other wears a traditional red hijab. On the surface, they seem to inhabit entirely different worlds. Yet look closer at their screens: their phones are not just devices, but portals into personal universes governed by the exact same laws of human emotion.

The "Love you" on the left and the Arabic script on the right do not compete they coexist and translate one another. This piece deconstructs the concept of the "other," revealing that no matter the outer form, our core human needs above all, the desire to love and be loved are completely universal.

SIZE : 30 X 30 OIL PAINTING POTAT

In the Depths of Feelings

This painting is a visual exploration of a mind drowning in its own emotions. At the center of the piece is a figure curled into a fetal position, utterly consumed by a pink and magenta abyss. It is a story of love as an elemental force: coming unexpectedly, sweeping us off our feet, and bestowing incredible energy, while simultaneously bearing a hidden danger.

Love here is not merely a tender emotion, but a colossal force. When we lack internal anchors, emotional maturity, and the capacity to handle this avalanche, such a profound gift turns into a tempest that breaks us and pulls us under. The artwork deconstructs the romantic myth, demonstrating that to hold and truly experience a deep feeling, one must first possess the strength to endure its scale.

The Heat

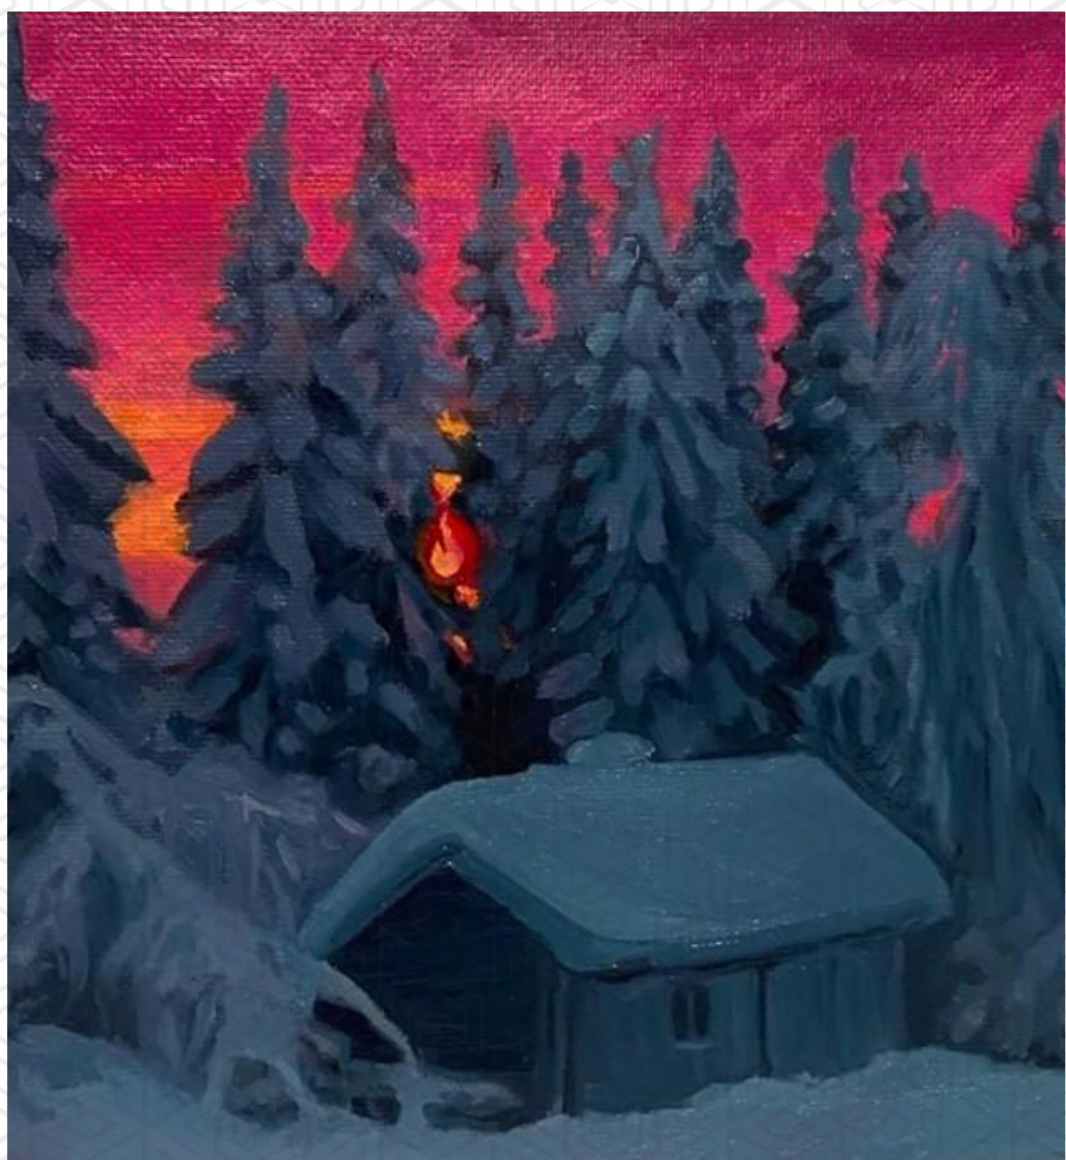

A story of unconditional tenderness, protection, and intimate warmth. A curly-haired angel gently cradles a tabby kitten against the backdrop of an ancient city tower. In her gaze, there is no distance only a calm, absolute acceptance and care. The painting serves as a reminder that true sanctity and light manifest in simple things: in the ability to warm, to protect, and to stand beside those who need it most.

A Cozy Home

This atmosphere is filled with quiet nostalgia and comfort. A snow-covered cabin nestles among snow-laden fir trees, while a dramatic, warm sunset blazes behind them. The painting brings back those precious moments from the past—when the frost crackles outside the window while you are wrapped in warmth, in a place where time seems to slow down. It is a gentle reminder of quiet childhood happiness, homey comfort, and a sense of absolute peace that is always so comforting to return to

Lilac Afternoon

This romantic and airy piece is about morning solitude, femininity, and savoring the present moment. A girl in a flowing lilac dress admires a delicate flower while a ginger cat purrs contentedly on her lap, surrounded by an abundance of fresh blooms.

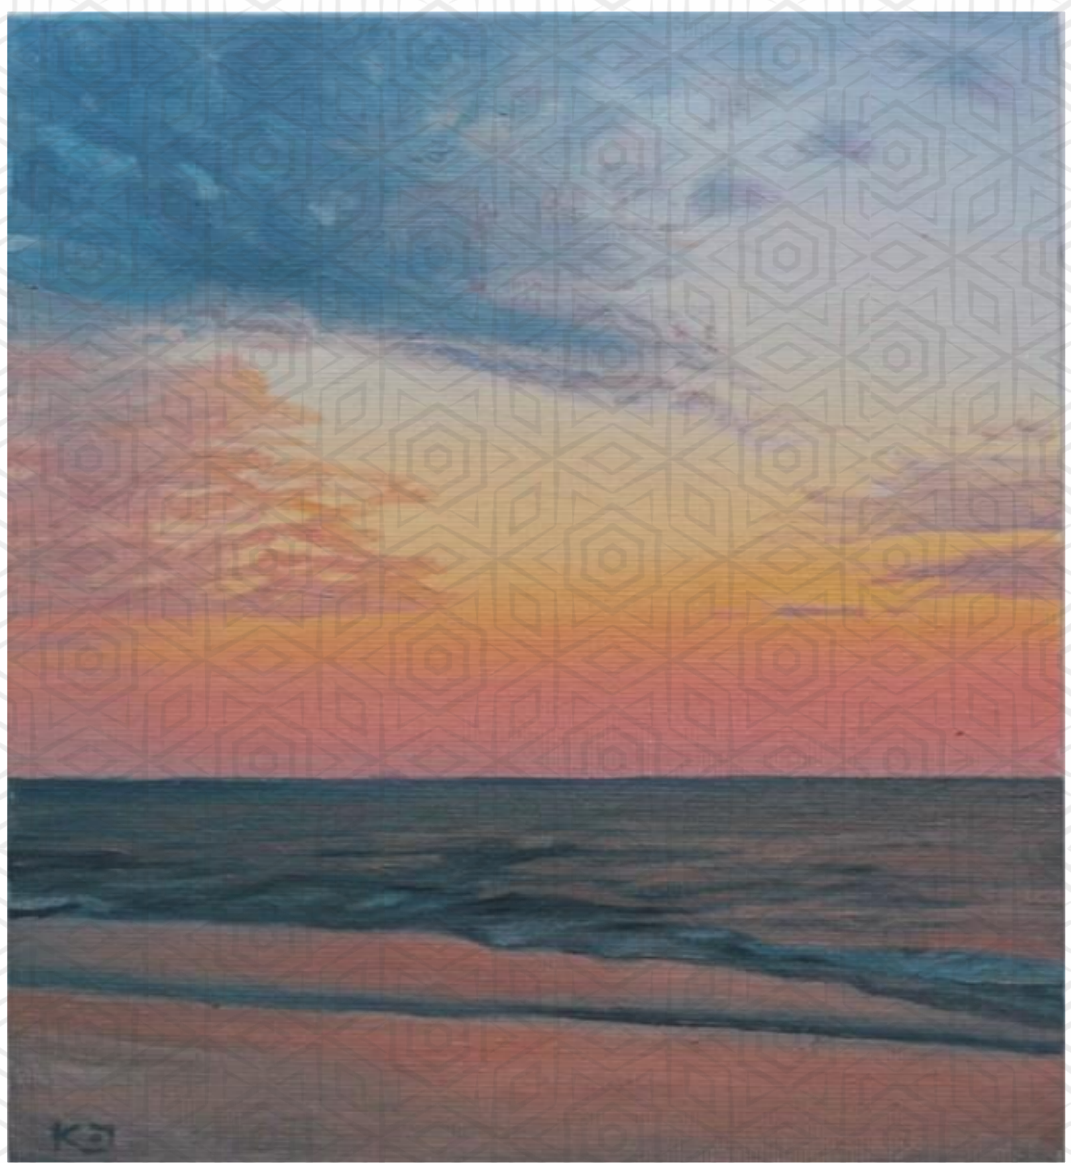

The painting serves as a reminder of the importance of simple rituals: slowing down, breathing in the scent of flowers, feeling the warmth of a companion, and allowing oneself to just be in the moment. It is the perfect centerpiece for a space where you wish to add aesthetics, harmony, and refined tenderness.

At The Edge of Dreams

The painting takes the viewer deep into the human subconscious into that fragile, liminal state between waking and sleep, where external masks fade away and only pure emotional essence remains.

Hands raised behind the head and closed eyes evoke total trust in the world, complete relaxation, and vulnerability. The protagonist seems frozen in a moment of self-reflection or meditative immersion, surrendering control over reality.

Dreamcatcher

The painting explores the fine line between the real world and deep dreaming, where consciousness frees itself from the noise of the day and merges into a sacred encounter with oneself.

The sleeping girl is in a state of complete serenity and trust as a dark, silhouetted hand gently touches her. There is no threat in this gesture it is a symbolic touch from within, a quiet dialogue with her own subconscious. While the body rests, the spirit explores the shadowy and hidden sides of her personality, finding a deep connection with her true self.

Rebirth

At the center of the composition is a male figure depicted at the moment of a tragic yet transformative clash with a force of nature. His body seems to merge with the power of a lightning bolt piercing his chest. Symbolizing radical change and inner struggle, the lightning fills the painting with a vivid light, creating a stark contrast with the surrounding darkness.

The canvas radiates a sharp, almost wild energy set against human vulnerability. The man appears both frail and powerful his face reflects fear, but also a drive to overcome. This image is not merely a tragedy, but an invitation to deeply reflect on inner rebirth and masculine dignity.

The artwork plays upon eternal themes of struggle and strength, the inevitable confrontation with personal demons, and symbolizes that pivotal moment when one transcends fear to pave the way for renewal.

Majestic Mountains

The painting captures a quiet, monumental moment as the setting sun illuminates the sharp peaks of a snow-covered ridge. The mountains stand frozen in their eternal majesty, taking in the final warm rays of the fading day. Rose-gold highlights from the sunset rest gently upon the snow-draped slopes, contrasting with the deep purple and bluish-gray shadows of the mountain crevices. Below stretches a dense, dark emerald forest, while the sky above the ridge fills with a soft lilac-peach glow that emphasizes the calm and tranquility of the evening. This artwork is about contemplation, monumental stillness, and the inspiring power of the wild.

Home For Two

This house is not a solitary project, but the work of two. The ability to listen, forgive, and support are the bricks of its foundation. The house we walk toward with our love is not a fairytale, but a reality we can build with our own hands. It is a place where harmony, mutual understanding, and boundless love reign. I have embodied this place in my painting and hope it serves as a reminder of this enduring love.

Goldfish

The painting immerses the viewer in an atmosphere of quiet, hypnotic reverie and a silent dialogue with one's inmost self. A young woman has reclined, resting her head beside a small, round fishbowl. Her gaze, directed through the glass at a single goldfish, is full of vulnerability, latent hope, and a soft melancholy. This is a moment of absolute stillness, where all external noise fades, leaving only the person and their most sincere, unspoken thoughts. The goldfish is a traditional symbol of wishes, seekings, and the hope that lives in the quietest depths of the soul. This work is about the fragility of hope and the search for contact with one's own desires.

Personal Comfort

Sometimes personal comfort matters far more than external glances or unspoken rules. Wrapped in a warm blanket, holding a cup of tea, a girl simply allows herself to feel cozy even in the middle of a noisy subway.

The figure in the background looks on intently, yet their face remains blurred, because the girl's sole focus is on her own comfort. She has chosen to claim a small piece of home serenity where no one would ever expect to find it. This painting is about the right to be yourself, to take care of your own well-being, and to never sacrifice your peace just because others might not understand. Sometimes the most important thing is not how you appear to the world, but how you feel within.

Dptych "The World of a Butterfly"

This diptych is a painterly exploration of how differences in perception can transform the very same reality. The two paintings depict the same scene, but seen through completely different perceptual lenses.

Part I: The Human Perspective (Lower Painting)

A light-filled, airy, and delicate painting reveals the world as we are accustomed to seeing it. It represents the external beauty of nature as humans perceive and experience it warm, clear, and serene.

Part II: The Butterfly's Perspective (Upper Painting)

A journey into the insects' inner, ultraviolet, and highly contrasted perception of the world. Here, the familiar meadow is transformed: the space is immersed in deep, mystical darkness, against which ultraviolet light patterns invisible to the human eye emerge. I can also make the translation more poetic and gallery-ready for an international exhibition

The Silence Between Us

A painting about an intimacy that needs no words. Two people lie side by side, dissolving into a single calm moment in touch, warmth, and a feeling of complete trust. There is nothing ostentatious here. Only a soft intimacy, where one can close their eyes and simply be with the person who brings them peace. Hands become the main language of this scene they speak of tenderness, care, and the longing to draw closer. This artwork is about the safety found in another's embrace, and that special state where the entire outside world seems to cease to exist.

Under the cover of night

In this painting, there is a sense of quiet, almost secret intimacy a moment that exists for only one. The warm body, the soft folds of fabric, and the deep turquoise shades create the atmosphere of an Oriental night where time itself seems to slow down.

The artwork speaks of a desire to hide away from the whole world, leaving behind only silence, warmth, and the feeling of the sky merging with a turquoise ocean.

The Guiding Thread

The painting immerses the viewer into an atmosphere of a mysterious contact between a person, the element of water, and their own internal compass.

A hand reaches down to the very surface of the water, and from the touch of a finger, a glowing directional arrow crowned with a luminous arc ripples outward. This is not mere water movement, but a metaphorical gesture—a moment when a casual touch reveals a hidden path and provides clear direction.

This work is about trusting your own steps, searching for inner landmarks, and believing that each of us is capable of drawing the vector of our own way forward.

Lullaby

The painting "Lullaby" is a touching, intimate immersion into the quiet world of maternal love and children's dreams. On the canvas, a mother bends over her sleeping little ones with tender affection, as if wrapping their peace in her care. Deep blue and azure night tones contrast softly with warm, golden light that catches the peaceful faces of the children from the shadows. A Cat's World

Cats' Perspective (or "Through a Cat's Eyes")

Cats, like dogs, do not see the full spectrum, but they perceive blue and yellow much better. Their world is cooler and more bluish, which is conveyed in the painting, though through the window they can still appreciate a beautiful autumn just as we do. Yet the most essential detail is the black cat and the deep green, almost blue leaves. Feline vision specializes in detecting movement and details in low light (dichromatic vision with a dominance of rods). Therefore, the world outside the window appears more contrasted to her, filled with sharp silhouettes,

SIZE : 30 X 30 Acrylic

A Dog's World

At the center of the composition is a white dog in a field of dandelions, holding a blue toy in its mouth. This painting fully corresponds to the scientifically proven dichromatic vision of dogs. The canvas's palette is dialed into blue-yellow and ochre tones. For a dog, red and green colors do not exist; thus, a field that would appear bright green with golden spots to a human is perceived as a fiery, yellow-brown sea. Its blue toy and its own white fur remain the purest and most recognizable spots of color in this world of muted earthy shades. This is a depiction of the world as a set of clear, tangible objects, where color merely emphasizes form and scent.

SIZE : 30 X 30 Acrylic

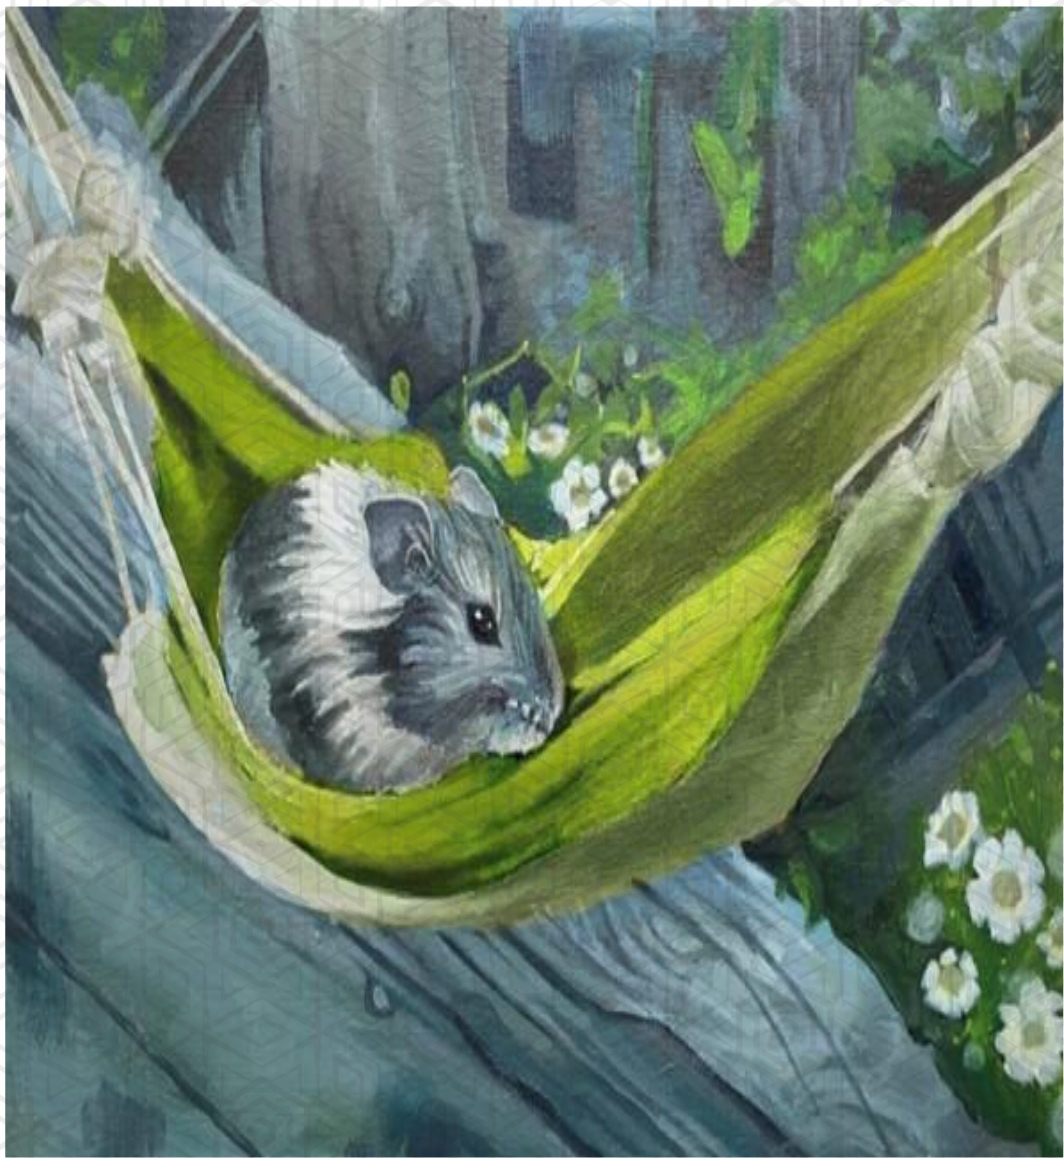

A Horse's World

This painting is the most complex in terms of scientific and artistic interpretation. It depicts a grazing horse in a mountain valley.

It is scientifically known that horses, like many ungulates, have eyes located on the sides of their head, providing a vision range of nearly 350 degrees—almost a full circle, with narrow blind spots directly in front and behind. Their color perception is also different. We have conveyed this through perspective distortion and the addition of spectrums. The valley appears unnaturally panoramic, "unfolded." The color palette includes not only familiar colors (yellow, blue) but also bright, pulsating spots on the flowers. This is an interpretation of a horse's ability to see ultraviolet light. Ordinary flowers in the field glow with these ethereal colors, as if steeped in a hidden source of energy. The painting captures a sense of vast, encompassing space filled with hidden, vibrating patterns.

SIZE : 45 X 30 Acrylic

A hamster's World

The storyline features a hamster fast asleep in a green fabric hammock among wooden beams and wildflowers. Since hamsters have poor color vision, the hammock remains green, as do the flowers with their yellow centers. However, to convey the specifics of its perception, we applied a background blur effect. The hamster and the hammock are in sharp focus, while everything beyond fades into a deep, dark shadow that mimics the sensation of a twilight space or a cozy burrow. This is not a world of "color distortions," but a world of "tactile sensations": the hammock and grass are rendered with an emphasis on texture, as if you could touch them. It is a world viewed as a collection of close, secure shelters, while everything else is just a soft, warm blur. It is a world where the most important things are what is right beside you and what you can smell.
